

Screening of "Brooklyn Matters"
6 pm ; Thursday, Feb 1
Higgins Hall Auditorium

A screening of Isabel Hill's film "Brooklyn Matters" about the proposed Brooklyn Atlantic Yards development will take place in Higgins Hall auditorium on Thursday February 1 at 6 p.m. It is co-sponsored by the Department of Media Arts, the Graduate Center for Planning and the Environment, and the Pratt Center for Community Development.

From the News Advisory: "This insightful documentary reveals the fuller truth about the Atlantic Yards proposal and highlights the challenges that it creates for Brooklyn. A panel discussion with Ron Shiffman and others will follow the screening.

Isabel Hill is a well-respected documentary filmmaker who has worked as a city planner and preservationist for more than three decades. Her first urban planning documentary Made In Brooklyn won the Elliot Willensky award before being broadcast on public television."
